ART AGENCY.

THE UNDERSIGNED HAVE ESTABLISHED an AGENCY for the general purchase of Works of Art, and of Art Materials.

Having peculiar facilities for the transaction of this business, both in this country and in Europe, they offer their services and judgment in the selection and purchase of Statuary, Paintings and Engravings, and of every description of material used in the practice of the Fine Arts.

In establishing this Agency, the object of the Proprietors is to enable those who may reside at a distance from the city to profit by the Art advantages of this market, and also to open a channel for information upon all matters appertaining to the growth of Art in this country. They are confident of encouragement in this new field, and can safely promise satisfaction to all who may favor them with their patronage.

No Work of Art will be received for sale upon any terms.

Orders must, in all cases, be accompanied with the money, or no attention will be paid to them.

THE CRAYON,

A Weekly Aesthetic Journal,

WILL COMMENCE ITS SECOND VOLUME JULY FOURTH.

IN announcing another volume of THE CRAYON, the conductors would avail themselves of the opportunity to reassert the principles which direct its course. It takes the broad ground that all intellectual effort is divided into two kinds—that which has for its object the preservation of life, and the care of the physical being, and that which tends to the perfection of the mental and spiritual nature; and that, while the former is necessary to the material existence, the latter is the nobler as essential to the higher and ultimate development of humanity.

It also asserts that among the impressions which the external-world sends to us through our senses, and which are made the subjects of intellectual action, the noblest and most exalting are those of Beauty; that the recognition and pursuit of the Ideal is that by which man most evidently shows his Divine origin, and that the principles, by the guidance of which he follows the Beautiful in the material—the Ideal of the Actual—are those by which he discovers the Beautiful in the spirit—the Ideal of the Immortal; and, consequently, that all light shining on Nature and her laws, illuminates the Soul in its aspirations to a perfect life.

It also maintains that Art is to be regarded as the great means of developing the Ideal-visible, and valuable in proportion as it contributes to such development, and, therefore, that the advancement of it, and the proper understanding of its laws, are essential to the perfection of humanity; that its interests are the interests of Mankind at large, and the encouragement of it in the right direction is a duty of Society. It consequently regards the moral element as that by which Art is to be estimated, and the intellectual and technical as only worthy of praise, when made secondary to this element.

It will not then look at Art from the technical point merely, but will take cognizance of all impressions of the Beautiful, as the subjects of artistic thought—not only of Painting, Sculpture and Architecture, but of Poetry, descriptions of Scenery and Character, Travels, and of Dress and decorative Art.

In pursuance of this plan, its conductors have secured the aid of most of the æsthetic writers of note of the age. The volume already completed contains contributions by Bryant, Ruskin, Lowell, Greenough, Durand, Huntington, Street, Henry, Chapman, and others, and we are happy to announce that for the future numbers, besides the above-named, we are authorized to promise contributions from Longfellow, Beecher, Bellows, Osgood, Bayard Taylor, Curtis, Charles Sumner, &c.

"THE CRAYON" consists of 16 pages, quarto, printed in handsome type, in three columns, and is published at $3.00 per annum, payable in advance.
